Several of these rebellions were resulting in the losses of secondary territories. Episode 18. Sokka and Toph continued to destroy the airship fleet. Fire Nation soldiers noticed the pair and attacked them. Aang gathered the four elements around himself and attacked Ozai. Princess Azula suggested that they burn the Earth Kingdom to the ground to destroy their hope. However, they were unable to catch up to the Fire Lord's flagship, which was further ahead, leaving the self-proclaimed Phoenix King Ozai unopposed when he began burning down the forest. eAAA From older Welcome to Republic City online game, originally on Nick.com. Toph used metalbending to bend the rudder of the hijacked airship, causing the ship to crash into the remaining airships. He announced his intention to maintain an alliance between himself and the Avatar and declared a new goal of setting the divided and scarred world back on the right path.[2] Appearances Avatar: The Last Airbender Book Three: Fire (SAA~A) Non-canon Avatar: The Last Airbender eAAA Into the Inferno Trivia The order in which Aang bent the four elements, air, fire, earth, water, into his floating orb is the Avatar Cycle in reverse: water, earth, fire, air. Unable to withstand the increasing heat, the shield broke, and Aang desperately tried to deflect the fire with airbending, being driven backward. "Sozin's Comet, Part 3: Into the Inferno". With the voices of all previous Avatars, Aang stated that the Fire Nation had devastated the balance of the world, and that Ozai must now pay the "ultimate price". Congratulating him, they noticed Ozai collapsed on the ground and asked if he was dead, only to have Ozai reply that he was still alive. He attempted to strike while Aang's back was turned, but Aang sensed his movement through seismic sense and quickly disabled him with earthen shackles. Episode 20.
