IELTS Writing Task 2 Explained

Writing task 2 is always a discursive essay (<http://writecampus.com/discursive.html>) question where you are given a point of view, an argument or a problem and asked for your opinion on the question.

You will often be asked to take a position from an argument: to agree or disagree. You can approach the question in TWO ways:

1. You can agree OR disagree
2. You can agree AND disagree, which is called 'for and against' essay (<http://academic-essays.info/2007/12/07/for-and-against-essay/>)

For and Against Essays

In this type of academic essay, the writer doesn't express his personal opinion until the conclusion. When you approach questions that ask you to discuss the advantages and disadvantages of something, write a 'for and against' essay.

Writing Task 2 requirements:

You must write at least 250 words in 40 minutes.

Your writing will be assessed on the following criteria:

1. Task response: how well do you understand the task and answer the question?
2. Coherence and cohesion: how your essay is organized and how the different parts are connected.

Sample Question:

Some people prefer to save money. Others prefer to use their money on things they will enjoy. What is the best approach towards money? Discuss both sides and give your opinion.

Organization	Tips
You'll need three body paragraphs: Body Paragraph 1: Discuss the first "side" of the issue Body Paragraph 2: Discuss the second "side" of the issue Body Paragraph 3: Give your opinion	In body paragraphs 1 and 2, you need to present both sides of the argument in a fair and balanced way. Don't support one side over the other in the first two paragraphs. When you express your opinion in the third body paragraph, you can: - Choose one side over the other very directly. - Point out a problem or limitation to one of the sides - Show how one side is best in one situation, while the other side is best in another situation. Be careful! Sometimes you are not asked to provide your opinion. In these cases, you should simply discuss both sides of the argument and that's all!

Some experts believe that it is better for children to begin learning a foreign language at primary school rather than secondary school. Do the advantages of this outweigh the disadvantages?

Traditionally, children have begun studying foreign languages at secondary school, but introducing them earlier is recommended by some educationalists. This policy has been adopted by some educational authorities or individual schools, with both positive and negative outcomes.

The obvious argument in its favour is that young children pick up languages much more easily than teenagers. Their brains are still programmed to acquire their mother tongue, which facilitates learning another language, and unlike adolescents, they are not inhibited by self-consciousness. In addition, the greater flexibility of the primary timetable allows for more frequent shorter sessions and for a play-centred approach, thus maintaining learners' enthusiasm and progress. Their command of the language in later life will benefit from this early exposure, while learning other languages subsequently will be easier for them. They may also gain a better understanding of other cultures.

There are, however, some disadvantages. Primary school teachers are generalists, and may not have the necessary language skills themselves. If specialists have to be brought in to deliver these sessions, the flexibility referred to above is diminished. If primary language teaching is not standardised, secondary schools could be faced with a great variety of levels in different languages within their intake, resulting in a classroom experience which undercuts the earlier gains. There is no advantage if enthusiastic primary pupils become demotivated as soon as they change schools. However, these issues can be addressed strategically within the policy adopted.

In my opinion, anything which encourages language learning benefits society culturally and economically, and early exposure to language learning contributes to this. Young children's innate abilities should be harnessed to make these benefits more achievable.
